

"JACK DAW 913" HAS NIGHT OUT; LANDS IN CELL

Carried to Station in a Box After Giving Police Strenuous Battle.

PROVES A LIVELY BIRD.

Booked Under Fictitious Name, but May Be Identified To-Day.

Jack Daw is a happy bird this morning. Although he is locked up in the East One Hundred and Fourth street police station and a general alarm has been sent out to the police seeking to identify him, he is much better off than when Policeman James Decker found him early to-day. He was then battling for his life with a roiling crowd on the way home from the Coney Island Carnival.

Decker is on a fixed post at One Hundred and Eleventh street and Fifth avenue, where any noise in the small hours of the morning is unusual. So it is not to be wondered at he was startled when he heard from down the street the noise of Jack in distress.

"Let him alone and I'll capture him," commanded Decker when he arrived on the scene and found Jack being chased by a crowd.

Nothing doing! Jack proved himself as clever as Abe Attell in the art of dodging, ducking and dodging. Decker first tried his helmet. He made one desperate effort, but Jack was there with the slightest stuff and Decker went sprawling on the ground. Oh, no, the crowd didn't laugh, they just jeered.

HONOR OF THE DEPARTMENT CALLS FOR STRATEGY.

Finally it became a question of maintaining the honor of the Police Department. Decker hid himself to a nearby store and, securing a piece of board and a soap box, returned to the battle.

Jack, like many scientific boxers of the past, took one chance too many and Decker slapped the box down over him.

But Jack was not down for the full count by a good deal. When Decker put his hand under the box Jack let go with a pile-driver blow of his back. It landed on the back of Decker's hand, and he knew he was hit for several days to come. Then Decker resorted to an old-time trick. He placed a piece of cloth on the ground and pushed the box over it. Then he turned it over, with the cloth as a cover, and in this way Jack was taken to the station house.

"What's that?" demanded Lieut. Hammond as Decker with his load appeared in the doorway. Hammond thought it might be a bomb.

"It's a prisoner," said Decker, "and I want you to lock him up."

"JACK" NEARLY MEETS HIS FATE IN "PETE."

"All right," replied Hammond, "bring him over here and we'll book him. Then Decker removed the cloth. Jack beat him to it, however, and escaped into the room.

Then the fun began. Hammond has tried every known remedy but hasn't been able to coax the hair out from its hiding place on the top of his head for years.

Jack made straight for the skating rink, and Hammond ducked under the table. Then Jack changed his course for what he thought was a nice fur blanket. It proved to be "Pete," the station house cat. He made a pass at Jack, but he ducked upward and caught the chandelier.

Then he sat still while Decker brushed him off into a bag. He was locked up. The only member of the police force identifying him is a tag attached to his right foot and numbered 913.

A Practically Perfect Preparation.

Years of experience have enabled Mr. Fletcher to make Castoria a practically perfect preparation. These years of labor: the amount of money required to introduce its merits to the public: the investment in its manufacture, including the most modern machinery, mean a vast amount of invested capital. It follows that the greatest care is exercised in the selection of each ingredient, and the greatest attention is paid to every detail of its preparation. The result: The practically perfect preparation in the finished product; Fletcher's Castoria.

Herein lies the guarantee of the absolute safety in the use of Fletcher's Castoria for the baby, and the warning against irresponsible makers of imitations and counterfeits. The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher that is printed in black on the wrapper and red on the bottle is the mother's safeguard.
